Fires Damage Harness Shop

Fire was discovered in Joe Humer's harness shop, last Friday night about 7.30, and after a hard fight the volunteers had the flames subdued. Along about 8.45, the same evening, the clarion notes of the fire-gong again pealed forth and a lurid light was seen. The fire had broken out again, and had gained considerable headway before the fire-eaters got going again on their deadly work, and after a stiff fight once more downed the hungry flames.

The fire was caused by a defective flue. Considering the start the fire had it was remarkable the way the men got it under control, with a minimum amount of damage.

The fires were confined to the back part of the shop and up around the roof.

The Red Cross Sale and Dance will be held in the Big Hall. Sale at 1, Dance at 8.30.

BUSY BIDEFORD

The little burg was busier than usual, this week, at the stock yards where a fine bunch of two year old steers were shipped east by Mr. Young, of Compeer. Another car of mixed stock, hogs and steers, was sent off by Cliff Wathing. The sight of so much edible stuff would have gladdened the eyes of the Hoovers, Hannas and Clynes, proving that tho the crops may fail and garden stuff be scarce there's always the stock for the western farmer to fall back upon in his bad years. On Pete Swanson's range is a fine bunch of some 70 or 80 head of cattle, and we hear Pete is looking for a purchaser.

Said a Bidefordite to the Red Cross worker, "Give a dollar to the Red Cross as a thank offering huh? I ain't got nuttin' to be thankful for, not a goll—d—thing!" Said the worker, who had just been chatting to a Canadian from the prison camp in Germany where men are starved, starved and rendered nearly crazy by the terrible "dark," silent cells. "Be grateful that you are right here in the West, where you can live a man's life without fear of the brutal Hun's ruthless cruelty to your wife and family, where you can eat and drink and be as merry as your conscience will let you without dread that the rations won't hold out. In the words of Robbie Burns:

"Some hae meat and canna eat
An some wad eat that want it
But we hae meat and we can eat
An we see the Lord be thankit!"
(Do we hear you say "Amen"?)

The Bideford boy had a spasm of gratitude and managed to cough up a bone. (Not from the chicken supper the Ladies Aid served, but from his pants pocket.)

George Conquest is home again from the construction camp at Alaska. Geo hopes to join up just as soon as he is old enough.

The Victory Loan is now in full swing, if you cannot go in person send your pocket book to fight for you. Besides the satisfaction of knowing you are licking the "Lords of War" and grinding them into German sausage meat, there is the thot that the Victory Bond is a capital investment.

A real cold snap came in on Tuesday just to tell us to get out our winter furs and fix up the extra stoves and heaters.

The pool room is now under the management of Mr. Patterson and we are sure the boys who are left, if there are any, will turn in there these cold, dark evenings. "Pat" will sure make a success of it, if anyone will, and we wish him luck.

Robert Stead's New Novel

Robert J. C. Stead, in his new novel, "The Cow Puncher," (Toronto, the Musson Book Co., Ltd., cloth, $1.50), has written a notable book with a Western Canada setting. David Elden, the cow puncher of the story, grows to young manhood on a ranch in the foothills, outside the influence of church or school. At eighteen he is accidentally thrown into the company of a young Eastern girl, who kindles in him the ambition to be somebody in the world.

With this purpose in view, he leaves the ranch and goes to make his fortune in a young Western city. The first night he is swindled out of all his ready cash by a gang of card-sharps, and he takes a job next morning as a coal heaver. For a time it looks as though Dave's course would be downward instead of up, but he fortunately comes under influences which revive his ambition for self-betterment.

About this time the big real estate boom breaks out, and his course is meteoric. His wealth comes and goes quickly. After the collapse of the boom a tragedy in his love affairs sends him as an enlisted man to France. In the closing chapters is found one of the highest patriotic notes struck by any author during the war.

"The Cow Puncher" is worth while, it is interesting, refreshing, and at times inspiring, written with all Mr. Stead's intimate knowledge of the West and skill of delineation. Through the book runs a happy vein of humor and philosophy which is not the least of its charms. It is illustrated by Arthur Hemmings, ex-hunter man and North-West Mounted policeman, and is an all-Canadian book—written & illustrated by Canadians, printed and bound in Canada. It should receive a warm welcome from the Canadian reading public. The U. S. edition is issued by Harpers.

The lantern slide service of the Department of Extension of the University of Alberta promises to be even more popular this winter than last.

Clubs or individuals wishing to avail themselves of this service should send in their applications as early as possible.

There are also indications that the Travelling Libraries will be in great demand.

Sir Thomas White on Victory Loan

Interesting Explanatory Address Delivered by Finance Minister at Calgary Before Alberta Editors and Loan Workers

Sir Thomas White, financial minister of Canada, was the chief speaker in a day of inspiration for the Victory Loan workers of Southern Alberta who were assembled in convention at Calgary on Friday, October 18. The meeting, which was presided over by Mr. Wm. Toome, chairman of the Southern Alberta paper editors and workers in the Victory Loan campaign from all points in southern Alberta.

At 12:30 the visitors were entertained to luncheon and a musical programme in the Palliser Hotel and at 2 o'clock Mr. Toome called the business meeting to order, when it was presided over by Mr. J. H. Woods, editor of the Calgary Herald until the arrival of Sir Thomas White at 3:30.

Sir Thomas Speaks
In opening his address, the minister, in view of the fact that he was addressing so many members of the fourth estate present, referred to his early days spent on the great Canadian newspaper, the "Star" in Toronto. It is a special pleasure, therefore, for me to meet the gentlemen of the press here," he said, "and I desire on this occasion to make a public acknowledgment to them for the splendid support and assistance I have received ever since I became finance minister. I would be lacking in courtesy and gratitude if I did not express my thanks especially to J. H. Woods of the Calgary Herald, who has been a constant help to me in the past, and to the members of the Canadian Press Association, and who did so much to make the public campaign of the Victory Loan so successful."

"It would be impossible for a minister of finance to carry on the finances of the Dominion of Canada in times of war," Sir Thomas said, "and I desire to thank those who are engaged in this work to realize that what you are doing greatly assists me in making it possible to carry on what would otherwise be impossible for the shoulders of one to bear, you can take that satisfaction in full measure."

Releates Difficulties
Sir Thomas reviewed at some length the difficulties that had arisen in connection with the finances of the country. It was, he said, in 1914, last year, that, owing to the entry of the United States into the war and the closing of the New York market, that Great Britain found herself unable to continue her purchases in Canada of Canadian products by reason of lack of funds, and he referred to the urgent messages he had received from Premier Lloyd George and Bonar Law—most recent messages asking that credit should be furnished for purchasing products required by Great Britain in Canada. Canada had been asked to furnish last year $125,000,000.

"That," said the minister, "represented an entire re-arrangement of our plan of finances," and he spoke of the co-operative effort that had been made in connection with the Victory Loan of 1917, paying a great tribute to the 11,000 or 12,000 men, numbering that their success had been unprecedented in securing $117,000,000 from 500,000 subscribers.

"Up to 1914 the Dominion of Canada," he said, "had never floated a loan within its own borders of $500,000,000 yet after four years of war, by organized effort, the fine spirit and patriotism of the people of Canada raised the enormous sum of $400,000,000 for the purpose I have mentioned. I think that was probably the greatest effort in the light of relative population, that any of the Allied countries have made since the commencement of the war."

Would Exceed Efforts

Continuing, Sir Thomas said that although these efforts had year had been unprecedented this year they were going to exceed them. They were looking forward with confidence to a total of $500,000,000 from 1,000,000 subscribers, "and I am sure we will get it," he said amid applause. "For this year we have the advantage of starting earlier and on a larger scale from the Atlantic and Pacific is very much better—not personally—but in the sense that there has been more time for the development of the effort, and of course, we will progress more rapidly."

fit by the experience gained last year. A tribute was paid by Sir Thomas to the extraordinary heroism and enthusiasm of the organizers engaged in the work this year.

The minister's reference to the wonderful effort of "our august mother overseas" and her achievements, was frequently punctuated with resounding applause, and he went on to relate how Lloyd George had stated that the Canadian forces had saved Calais in 1915. He had been specially struck in connection with this when last year he crossed from Folkestone to Boulogne. "If Germany had won in 1915," he said, "the whole course of the war might have been changed. Theoretical soldiers," he said, "the Canadians are not theoretical soldiers," he added, "and although they went into battle and saved the day. On the testimony of professional soldiers," he said, "the Canadian corps at the front is probably the most formidable of any unit taking part in this war."

Eternal Credit
"It is to the eternal credit of Canadians," he said, "that the forces have taken the part they have in this war," continued the minister. "The Germans were able to reason of what they have done and what they have suffered. From the beginning in connection with the Victory Loan, they were the first to enter combat, and according to press reports, in connection with the break the Hindenburg line—so badly broken that all Hindenburg is not able to reorganize it in his own (Germany)—and so right down to the full relief of the enemy."

Sir Thomas here read a message he had received from Sir Arthur Currie in connection with the Victory Loan which aroused much enthusiasm. This expressed the faith of the men at the front in the people at home and in the success of the forthcoming loan. The minister also read his reply to Gen. Currie, in which he said the inspiring message would appeal to the people of this country, and expressing his hearty congratulations at the success of the Canadians under his leadership, ending with the words, "God bless and keep you all."

Continuing, Sir Thomas referred to the enormous undertaking of carrying on the war in Europe. Of the 500,000 men as Canada's quota, 100,000 have gone overseas, and he had been from a country as large as the United States, but with a population of eight millions, and a people of mixed nationality. That was a tremendous effort, and he must not overlook the fact that these soldiers were not fighting in the front line, but thousands of miles from home. Just Canada's effort was not confined to this, but a sum of $500,000,000 on the war," he said, "and the present expenditure is over $1,000,000 a day.

Benefits of 1917 Loan
Sir Thomas here turned to the prosperity of Canada. "In view of the sacrifices made by those who have gone forth, one does not like to speak of material prosperity," he said, "but I do not make any apology in doing so, for it is manifest to all that the better condition we are in financially the more capable we will be of carrying out the war. And much of the prosperity has been directly caused by the Victory Loan of 1917; indeed, said the minister, "I have no hesitation in saying that it had not have been for the Victory Loan and its success, the conditions in Canada would be very different from what they are. If we had been unable to raise the money we did there would have been very considerable depression in all parts of Canada, whether agricultural or otherwise."

In reviewing how the country had benefited by the loan, the minister referred to the shipbuilding of British Columbia at the present time. Every dollar paid by the Imperial Munitions Board for ships has been furnished by the Dominion government. Every ship built by the Munitions Board had come from the Victory Loan. There was aeroplane construction, and British Columbia had the finest success for that purpose in the world. Nine to ten million dollars had been expended in that direction. In the prairie provinces there was the wheat crop, and arrangements had been made whereby the extremely surplus was purchased by the government at the lowest possible price. The same was applied to the cheese of Ontario and to committees of many basic industries. So that all over the country was to be found the beneficial effect of the last Victory Loan. He said there was therefore a personal interest on the part of everyone in Canada to make the present Victory Loan a success. Although the crops in the three prairie provinces had not come up to their high expectations after the effort that had been made to increase production, he felt assured that they would not only reach their quota, but would exceed their fine contribution of last year.

Time Is Opportune
The minister of finance then turned his attention to the situation in Europe. He said that the Canadians to the loan was excellent, and this could not be more favorable than at the present time. He said he had to visualize by any stretch of our imagination," said the speaker, "we cannot realize the momentous character of the situation last spring and the wonderful success of the last year."

about in the last few months. There was a time in March and April of this year when the destiny of the empire and of the world hung in the balance. Russia had collapsed, and the Germans were able to bring their legions to the west. Their plan was one of the utmost audacity. The intention was to drive the British into the sea, and then to march towards Paris. They knew the Americans were arriving in larger numbers, and they had to stake everything upon the die. And they nearly succeeded. Why they did not succeed, of rather renew their attack, we do not know. Then came the great pressure under General Foch. Since then the whole allied line has gradually gone forward and the German army is now in full retreat. All that transformation has been brought about in a few months, the enemy being driven out of France and Belgium into his own lair.

"See Foch"
"Then the German peace overtures started," said the speaker. "Since then they would have been able to evacuate Belgium and France. Of course they would be glad to evacuate Sir Thomas. The soldiers now know how. Wilson has said, 'no dealing with the Hohenzollerns; if you want an armistice see Foch.' I do not believe a durable peace can be established until Prussian militarism is discarded in the eyes of the German people and until the Hohenzollern dynasty is overthrown," said Sir Thomas, a remark which was applauded to the echo. "No responsible man would prolong this war for one day or moment longer than was absolutely necessary, and I am sure we have regard to all the blood and treasure and heartbreakings of this terrible struggle, the most terrible mankind has ever known—it will not do to stop now until the full fruits of victory are consummated. I do not believe that any lasting peace is possible in this world until the democratic freedom of governing that we have in Great Britain, in Canada, in the United States and France is general among the great nations of the world."

"And the Great Britain has done?" asked Sir Thomas. She has poured out her blood and treasure without stint. She has a national debt of twenty-six billions today. She advanced seven billions to her Allies and spent her money like water to support her Allies. Ottawa," said Sir Thomas, "had handled some $1,000,000,000 in gold for Great Britain."

No Doubt of Issue
"The day may be long," concluded Sir Thomas, "but there will be only one ending and that is victory. We are beginning to see the goal of our efforts and sacrifice. One thing we know for certain, and that is, that the issue is no longer in doubt. With this great fact in mind," concluded Sir Thomas, "let us put forth our greatest efforts to make the Victory Loan of 1918 a victory loan indeed."

After Sir Thomas had completed his speech, short addresses were delivered by Robert J. C. Stead, chairman of the Southern Alberta public committee, and G. R. Murchie, ex-chairman of the Southern Alberta executive. The meeting then resolved itself into committees for the more detailed discussion of ways and means to insure the success of the Victory Loan.

Note and Comment

The following precautions
should be observed in the case against Influenza, which has spread across the continent.

(1) The sick should be kept
by themselves.

(2) Discharges from the nose
and mouth should not be allowed to get dry on a handkerchief or inside the house or in the stores. They should at once be collected in paper or clean rags and burned. If this cannot be done, they should be dropped into a vessel containing water.

(3) Infected articles and all rooms should be cleansed and disinfected. Use disinfectants everywhere. Wash the hands frequently.

(4) Those attacked should not, on any account, mingle with other people for a least a period of ten days from the commencement of the attack.

(5) Special attention should be given to cleanliness and to ventilation. Warm clothing should be worn, the feet kept dry and all unnecessary ex-posure avoided.

Quinine, thymol, listerine
and chloretone make excellent sprays, washes and inhalations.

Still another fire and nothing
yet done in the way of providing pails, axes, ladders, etc., and keeping them in a place where they can be found, when needed.
Another thing needed is someone who will have the authority to take charge, in case of a fire, and say what should and should not be done, thus stopping the needless destruction of valuable property. The necessary fire apparatus should be stored at some convenient point
And Kept There, without every
